

THREE TRIBES PREPARING FOR AN INDIAN WAR

Cheyennes and Crows
Ready to Join In With Rebellious Utes.

RUTHE, Mon., Oct. 31.—Eight hundred Cheyenne Indians, armed with Springfield rifles or the modern repeaters, and hundreds of rounds of ammunition, are ready to join. If they have not already joined, the runaway Utes from the Utah reservation. When the United States troops of the Sixth and Twelfth Cavalry come upon them there will undoubtedly be bloodshed. It is expected that the cavalry forces, which are under the command of Col. Aspin, who has arrived near the Ute camp from Fort Keogh, will have completely surrounded the Utes by this evening.

The crows are also believed to be ready to join with the Utes and Cheyennes, but the crows are not looked upon as very dangerous. The Cheyennes, however, are among the most desperate fighters of all the tribes of the Northwest, and because of the supply of arms which they possess, and which they have been buying for the last year, in expectation of some emergency, they are considered for who will not give up until the last.

Knows the Cheyennes.
"Jesse James" Roush is guiding the Twelfth Cavalry. He is thoroughly familiar with Indians, especially with the Cheyennes, whom he has encountered more than once. He was one of the companions who in 1888 was with Capt. Cook when he was sent against this tribe. The year before he was in the battle of the Little Blaine with the Cheyennes, and was on the scene when Chief Lame Deer made an attempt on Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Lame Deer, Little Wolf and Standing Wolf, the present chiefs of the Cheyennes, are well-known to Roush, and he looks upon them as Indians who will take delight in stirring up trouble. The Utes are believed to be entrenched in a strong position not far from Arvada, Wyo., but it is thought they will march on to-day in the direction of the Cheyenne reservation, where they hope to stay until their case can be disposed of at Washington.

War Fires Flaming.
Before daylight their fires were seen for many miles flaring brightly. Old settlers on the Tongue River and all about the vicinity where the different tribes are assembling are greatly excited, and many have fortified their ranches.

The Utes have become very brave within the last year or so and have openly attacked ranches and carried off stock. Like the Cheyennes, they are well armed and have plenty of cartridges.

It is believed in military circles that if the Crows, Utes and Cheyennes form a junction and decide to give fight to the soldiers there will be a serious battle.

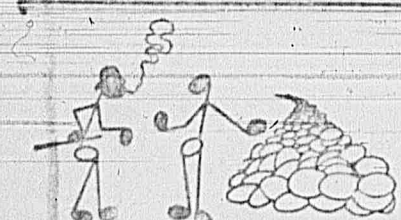

Reports from men who have been in the Ute camp are that Chief Knap is urging his tribesmen to fight to the last rather than go back to Utah, where the Indians claim, they must survive.

It is reported from Sheridan, Wyo., that the cavalry forces now in pursuit of the Utes will probably succeed in surrounding them on Bear Creek, which is a tributary of the Tongue River. By forced marches they may be done some time today, in case the Cheyennes have not yet joined the Utes.

LAW AS TO WOMEN WORKERS UPHELD

Appeal to Be Made in Test
Case of Statute Limiting Employment to 60 Hours.

Justice Olmsted, in Special Sessions to-day handed down a decision sustaining the constitutionality of the law limiting the working hours of a woman to sixty a week.
The opinion was in the case of Porter L. Howe, proprietor of a steam laundry, convicted recently of employing women longer than the hours prescribed. It is the intention of the attorneys for Mr. Howe to appeal from Justice Olmsted's decision and carry the matter to the United States Court for a final decision.
Several months ago the section of the law relating to the employment of women after nine o'clock at night was declared unconstitutional, and for the purpose of determining the constitutionality of the rest of the law, a test case was brought by Attorney-General Mayer against Mr. Howe.
In his decision, Justice Olmsted declared that the statute under dispute is both a police and health regulation and as such, is a proper exercise of the police power of the State.

Conclusions.
(From the Philadelphia Press)
"I notice," said the veteran trout, "that your young wife has disappeared."
"Yes," replied the other veteran, "a fly dropped in the water near her this morning and without investigating she concluded it was all right."
"Yes," so she jumped at the conclusion and that concluded her.

Although priced at $25, these coats match in value garments sold at $40 and even more. Inspection will show this to be a conservative statement. We assert that they are positively unequalled in this city.

ENGLAND TO FIGHT US?

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons as to whether there was any provision in the Anglo-Japanese treaty safeguarding British dominions from becoming involved in a war with America on behalf of Japan, Earl Grey, the Foreign Secretary, wrote a reply in which he referred the question to the text of the agreement. The Foreign Secretary added: "This agreement is of a general character, and there is no indication that it is likely to lead to war with any other power."
